BRITAIN WARNS MUSSOLINI

'Grave Concern' Over French Crisis

LONDON, Dec. 14 (AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain served notice in the House of Commons today that any Italian aggression toward French Tunisia would be a "matter of grave concern" to the British government.

He made the statement in reply to a question whether "undertakings in respect of the status quo in the Mediterranean as embodied in the British-Italian agreement applied to Tunis."

While he spoke, anger grew in parliamentary circles over an unusual Nazi rebuff last night when German diplomats and newspapermen boycotted a dinner at which Chamberlain spoke.

BULLETIN

LONDON, Dec. 14 (INS)—The Labor party in the House of Commons today introduced a motion of censure of the government's foreign policy. The motion will be debated next Monday.

DEPLORES ATTACK HINT

Chamberlain declared before Commons: That "certainly" the status quo agreement applied to Tunisia.

"We cannot, however," Chamberlain added, "contemplate the possibility of such an attack as suggested in the question put by Mr. Arthur Henderson."

Henderson, a Laborite, had asked whether "his majesty's government will represent to the Italian government that aggression against Tunis will not find this country disinterested."

London circles took a serious view of the German ambassador's boycott of Chamberlain's speech at a foreign press association dinner here last night, although German officials in Berlin professed not to be greatly disturbed by the incident.

Chamberlain's rebuke to the Nazi press for its "vituperation" against Earl Baldwin, former prime minister—called a "gutter-snipe" by a Berlin paper—caused the envoy and other Nazi representatives who knew of it in ad-

One Firm Halves Hurricane Profits

Attorney General Paul A. Dever, interrupting his public hearing into hurricane and storm contracts, announced today that he has obtained an agreement from the Benjamin Foster Co., Philadelphia, to slash its profit clause in half.

The company has agreed, Dever said, that state contracts on a "cost plus 20 per cent" basis will be reduced to "cost plus 10 per cent" on all billings in connection with hurricane repair work done after October 29.

Dever's action came after questions at the hearing had revealed that a contract awarded the company by the State Department of Conservation had never been modified, despite legislative stipulation that not more than $360,000 should be spent on the "cost plus 20 per cent" bassi.

TAKES RESPONSIBILITY

At today's session of the probe, Ernest J. Dean, confirmed last week at a night session of the governor's council as state commissioner of conservation, took full responsibility for $1,000,000 of hurricane contracts awarded by his department.

He denied, however, that any of his contracts were prompted or suggested, or promoted by "any

'Gray Glove' Bandits Get 12-20 Year Sentences

Justice, swift and stern, wrote a dramatic finis today to the swashbuckling crime careers of Boston's youthful "Gray Glove" bandits.

Pleading guilty to one of a dozen bold holdups of which they were accused, Paul J. Edge, 1[illegible]; Joseph G. Lyons, 21, and Walter T. Cahill, 21, were sentenced to 12 to 20 years each in State Prison.

It was just 144 hours from the day they were booked as bandits—and they were on their way to prison on minimum sentences of 144 months!

Sobs of women relatives of the defendants broke a sudden silence which ensued after the sentences were imposed in Dedham Superior Court by Judge Harold P. Williams.

McLAUGHLIN HELD

The robbery of the East Milton branch of the Milton Savings Bank, for which the bandit trio was punished, was committed on November 30, a scant fortnight ago.

Justice, swift and stern!

In court today with Edge, Lyons and Cahill was their alleged accomplice, John M. McLaughlin, 21, of Dorchester.

He pleaded not guilty to a charge of having been accessory after the fact of the East Milton holdup.

Judge Williams held him for later trial.

LOVE PLAYS PART

All four accused youths were picked up for questioning a week ago, one before midnight, the others a few hours later.

They were booked at police headquarters Thursday morning, first on the $3091 Milton robbery.

The 144 hours which elapsed between formal arrests and sentences of Edge, Lyons and Cahill were packed with off-the record drama.

Love of Cahill, self-confessed leader of the "Gray Glove" gang, for a pretty, dark-haired Dorchester girl influenced him to "talk" to save her from police grilling, the Boston Evening American learned.

The girl is Maude Blackadar, 19, of Coleman street, Dorchester.

Cahill was allegedly in her company when the law put its hand on his shoulder.

"Why ring her in on this?" Cahill demanded. "I'm the guy you want. I'll make you a proposition.

"Leave the girl out and I'll talk. I'll spill the whole story. I'll confess to everything."

So it was arranged.

And Cahill did talk.

First at Boston police headquarters, later at the Milton police station, he told an amazing tale of the "Gray Glove" gang's banditry career before and after violent death of two of its one-time members, James Sullivan and Harold Ananian.

Sullivan was fatally shot in a gun battle with police. Ananian hanged himself in a Charles street jail cell.

Cahill, who took over leadership of the gang from Sullivan, described a long series of bank, hotel and payroll robberies which he said were staged under his direction.

$15,000 Dope Seized in Raid

In a spectacular raid, staged after hours of painstaking labor, police seized heroin valued at $15,000 today in a Norway street, Back Bay, apartment.

James ("Duke" Goss, 35, recently released from Leavenworth prison, where he served time for dope-peddling, is under arrest.

Goss was arrested by Detective Francis Sweeney and Michael J. O'Brien yesterday when he refused to answer their questions.

On the face of it, it was a routine arrest, with little likelihood of important developments coming from it. But Sweeney and O'Brien are determined young men.

They had Goss photographed, and began a painstaking door-to-door canvass of the district in which he was seized.

A storekeeper recognized the photograph, and told them he believed the man lived on Norway street.

At 3 o'clock this morning, with keys found in Goss' possession, the two began trying doors in apartment houses.

Finally, at 11 o'clock, eight hours after they began, they found a lock in which the key fitted.

In the apartment they located 12,000 grains of heroin, plus two and a half pounds of material used to dilute the drug for sale. They also found 200 phoney slugs for use in telephones and subways.

They also found nine suits of clothes, several overcoats, and many letters, some from ex-prisoners in the federal prison.

Goss was held in $50,000 bail at a preliminary arraignment for drug-peddling.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF TEAMSTERS' UNION, LOCAL NO. 25

This Union, its officers, and members, are solidly behind our International President. The strike by the Warehousemen of Local No. 829 is absolutely illegal and unauthorized.

I have issued instructions to all of the officers and stewards of Local No. 25 that we are going to do everything in our power to maintain the authority of responsible leadership in Union affairs. It is against the best interest of the men for local officials anywhere to call unauthorized strikes or other stoppages of work.

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company has been negotiating, in my opinion, in good faith with the Warehousemen, and there was no possible excuse for Local Union No. 829 to precipitate this strike when our International President asked for a week's postponement of the negotiations.

Mr. Joseph Stack, business agent of Warehousemen No. 829 was present at the last negotiations, understood clearly that there was a retroactive agreement, and was subsequently so notified by Mr. P. Harry Jennings, General Organizer of the International Union; and Mr. Stack, therefore, knew that no member of his own Union could lose anything by the postponement, and certainly knew that they would lose heavily by an unauthorized strike.

This flouting of authority by a single local officer damages the rights of Union men, not only throughout New England, but throughout the country. We have built the Union movement in the American Federation of Labor and in the International Teamsters' Union by a long record of faithful observation of our obligations and respect for our own organization.

In this case, the A&P Tea Company has conducted negotiations with us in good faith, and the breach of faith by the actions of Mr. Stack is inexcusable. I expect the members of Teamsters' Union No. 25 to do everything in their power to facilitate deliveries for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company. I have heard of some stoppage of these deliveries, and I serve public notice now that any officers or members of this Union violating our good faith in this way will be subject to charges which will be preferred by me.

(Signed) JOHN M. SULLIVAN,
President and Business Representative,
Teamsters Union, Local No. 25, Boston.

Policeman on Trial Accused In Attack Case

How a Winthrop police officer allegedly attempted to attack an attractive young housewife, threatening her with a gun and beating her when she resisted his advances, was told in Suffolk Superior Court today.

The officer, Milton J. Whalen, 35, went on trial before Judge William C. Giles and a jury.

In an unusual warning from the bench, members of the jury were cautioned against discussing the case and ordered to report at once any attempted effort to influence them outside the courtroom.

Outlining the government's case, Assistant District Attorney James T. Cassidy said the victim of the attack attempt was Mrs. Anna O'Halloran, 31, of Underhill street, Winthrop.

She is the wife of George O'Halloran, a Deer Island house of correction guard, and the mother of a six-year-old daughter.

Cassidy said evidence would be offered showing that Officer Whalen drove Mrs. O'Halloran to a lonely spot near Fort Heath, Winthrop, and there attempted to force attentions upon her.

The young matron had entered Whalen's car, Cassidy contended, on the supposition that he would take her directly home from a friend's house, where she had spent the evening.

When she resisted Whalen's advances, Cassidy said, the officer brandished a gun and threatened her. When she still fought and screamed she was beaten, the jury was told.

Once Mrs. O'Halloran broke away from Whalen and ran shrieking from the car, only to be caught and dragged back into the auto, Cassidy charged.

The injuries she received in the beating were so severe, he added, she was under doctors' care for more than a week.

First testimony was to be presented later today.

On the more serious charges against him Officer Whalen can be sentenced to life imprisonment if found guilty.

The other charge carries a possible sentence of 10 years in state prison.

Gable To Ask Liberty

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 14—Clark Gable broke his silence of three years today and told this writer that he would ask his wife, Mrs. Maria Gable, for a divorce.

This brief statement came on the heels of a magazine article in which Mrs. Gable is quoted as saying she would gladly divorce Clark if he asked for a divorce.

SUIT HEARD TODAY

It is expected that he will suggest she go to Reno, since it is no secret that he will wed Carole Lombard the moment he is free.

Mrs. Gable was reported to have received a settlement of about $300,000 in three years.

Recently her husband filed action to determine whether she intended to go through with the terms of their settlement. The preliminary suit comes up today in Judge Ruben Schmidt's court.

NEARER HIS AGE

Few marriages in Hollywood, I believe, would have such a good chance of surviving as that of the blonde, beautiful Carole and the screen hero No. 1. Both of Clark's previous wives, Mrs. Josephine Dillon and Mrs. Ria Langham Gable, as her intimates call her, were older than he.

Carole is nearer his own age and has the same interests and likes the same things—tennis, shooting, horseback riding, fishing and all outdoor sports.

"One reason Carole and I can be happy," Clark once told me, "is that she has the greatest sense of humor of any girl I ever met, and she is one of the kindest persons I know."

Ruth Etting Elopes By Air, Weds Pianist

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Dec. 14 (INS)—Ruth Etting, the songbird of stage, screen and radio, and Myrl Alderman, her pianist and the victim of a gun blast by Ruth's former husband, Colonel Martin Snyder, were married at Las Vegas today.

With a party of friends, Miss Etting and Alderman flew in a chartered plane from Los Angeles, where Colonel Snyder, known on New York's Broadway and Chicago's Loop as "Moe-the-Gimp," is on trial for shooting the pianist.

They were rushed by motor from the airport to the office of County Clerk Lloyd Payne.

"We'd like to be married," said Alderman simply.

He gave his age as 30 and said he was divorced December 3, 1937, in Los Angeles.

Miss Etting said she is 37 years of age and was divorced from the Gimp in Chicago November 30, 1937.

With the marriage license, the blues singer and Alderman and their party went into chambers of the district court, adjoining the county clerk's office, and called the Rev. Charles Sloan, a Baptist minister.

The Rev. Sloan pronounced the ceremony that made them man and wife. They hurried back to the airport and took off for Los Angeles.

Witnesses at the wedding were Edith Snyder, the gimp's 21-year-old daughter by a previous marriage; Nick Castro, musician and friend of Alderman, and Bernard Cohen, Alderman's attorney.

Woman Dives To Death

Ill and in care of a nurse for several weeks, Mrs. Thais M. Connare, 50, of Nottinghall road, Brighton, was dead today, victim of a 75-foot plunge from the roof of a five-story apartment house.

Harry Holt, a janitor, found her body on a lawn outside the building a short time after her nurse, Miss Matilda McLean, had reported to police that her patient was missing.

According to Miss McLean, Mrs. Connare sent her to the kitchen for some warm milk. Returning within five minutes, the nurse found Mrs. Connare missing, and she and Holt searched the building for the woman.

Police said the victim had apparently slipped from her bedroom and gone through a hallway to stairs which led to the roof.

Mrs. Connare's daughter, Edna, who was married two weeks ago to J. A. Doyle of Rutledge road, Belmont, was grief-stricken today over her mother's death.

Hub Boy Under Knife at Sea

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (INS)—A dramatic appendicitis operation at sea, with a captain who didn't know if he "could stand it" holding the forceps, was revealed today with the arrival of the American Republics liner Argentina.

The appendectomy was performed on Junior Third Officer George Dietrich, 24, of Dorchester, Mass., shortly after midnight of December 2, while the ship was two days out of Rio de Janeiro on her first voyage in the new "good neighbor" service to South America.

STRICKEN ON BRIDGE

Stricken on the liner's bridge, Dietrich was carried to the cabin of the ship's surgeon, Dr. Hugh Nicly, who said an immediate operation was necessary to save the man's life.

With no assistant surgeon or anesthetic available, Dr. Nicly called upon Captain Thomas Simmons, master of the Argentina, and chief officer Edward O. Ohman to aid him.

"It was the first operation I ever saw," Captain Simmons said. "I didn't know if I could stand it, but I found it didn't bother me much. The nurse took care of the instruments, the chief officer gave the anaesthetic and I held the incision open with forceps while Dr. Nicly operated."

"AN OLD SEA SURGEON"

Chief Officer Ohman said the operation was just "routine" for him, explaining he was "an old sea surgeon" and had often helped out in operations aboard ships.

Dietrich remained aboard the Argentina today, with his condition reported as excellent. He is expected to be fit for duty in another week.

Mercy for Girl Who Ate Check

Admitting that she swallowed a check amounting to $50.20 in order to protect a male companion, Mrs. Lillian Silvier, 20, bride of two months, was given a six-month suspended sentence today after being found guilty in Roxbury court on two counts of larceny.

The girl's arrest also resulted in reconciliation with her husband, Arthur, of Bowdoin street, West End, whom she had left shortly after their marriage.

Police Leave To Get Byrne On Coast

As Everett police started for Los Angeles today to bring back Francis P. Byrne, the city's former soldiers' relief commissioner, an increased estimate of his alleged defalcations was made public.

City Auditor Arthur McKinnon said Byrne apparently converted to his own use $5500 in grocery orders, in addition to $2500 in cash and checks he was originally charged with embezzling.

Missing since September, Byrne was arrested in Los Angeles after a nation-wide search.

Special Officers Eugene Tobin and John F. Hughes of Everett left by train today to arrange for his extradition.

Byrne, a disabled World War veteran, is married and the father of six children.

Dewey Sq. Fire Drives Out 400

With smoke swirling about them, more than 300 employes of the Massachusetts Unemployment Commission groped their way down four flights of stairs to the street today as flames swept through the five-story building in Atlantic avenue, Dewey square.

Firemen ordered the building cleared as the blaze crackled between the walls on the third and fourth floors, and 100 employes of the Massachusetts Envelope Company, on the first floor, were ordered out.

Fortunately, for all the smoke and confusion, coolness prevailed and none was hurt.

Traffic in Dewey square was tied up 20 minutes as hundreds gathered to watch the fire.

Employes first noticed thin wisps of smoke and shortly afterwards an automatic alar and sprinkler system sounded a warning.

The blaze spread so quickly that workers in the Unemployment Commission could barely find the fourth-floor stairway.

Damage was estimated at $1000. Cause of the blaze was laid to defective wiring.

SCENE of famous Verna Russel slaying was visited by Dr. George Burgess Magrath who performed autopsy on Fall River nurse and then gave testimony that was instrumental in convicting Elliott Hathaway, now erving life sentence in R. I. state prison.

ELLIOTT HATHAWAY

'Take the Stand, Dr. Magrath'

How Hathaway Was Convicted

Dr. George Burgess Magrath said have had a good time if the kind of a funeral they're giving him today at Harvard's Memorial Church . . .

There'll be organ music for a thing—and he loved it. Then, too, there'll be a gathering of theldsters of the Harvard Alumni Chorus, of which he was a member almost all of his life. And it'll be quiet, genteel, peaceful—entirely typical of the kind of a life he led away from test tubes and post mortems . . .

But, for the most part, his life was made up of blood and tragedy, violent death and the vengeance dounded of the guilty by outraged society . . .

By GEORGE F. CLARKE

If there was a moon that night, shadows of cell bars slanted across the graveyard as they brought up the body of murdered Verna Russell for a second post-mortem . . .

And the shadows followed the body into the autopsy chambers where Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston's veteran medical examiner, stood ready for that examination which, at last, was to turn the shadows into real bars which even as you read, cage young Elliott Hathaway in the Rhode Island State Prison . . .

And they will keep him there theoretically for the rest of his life; or, at least, until such time as it is decided that he had paid enough for the killing.

TEN WORDS DID IT

It took ten words to do it, no more no less . . .

The ten words, which had their origin in that autopsy room, after the second post mortem, were uttered from the witness stand by Doctor Magrath. They were uttered deliberately, quietly, and with complete finality. The question was:

"Do you mean by that, doctor, strangulation?"

The answer:

"Yes . . . manual strangulation, or throttling, which is death, by asphyxia."

Two words among the ten burned with a terrible fire. They were the clinchers.

"Manual" means by the hands "Throttling" means the specific act of strangulation by the hands. Those two words put Elliott Hathaway's fingers about Verna Rus-

Jury Indicts Boston Broker

The Suffolk County grand jury today returned a secret indictment against a Newton man, who had his stock brokerage offices in Post-office square, charging larceny of approximately $120,000 from 38 complainants in all parts of the state.

This indictment climaxes a probe into affairs of the broker, launched recently by Attorney General Paul A. Dever.

Evidence against the broker, who has not yet been arrested on the indictment, was presented to the grand jury by Assistant Attorney General Daniel J. Doherty, former American Legion national commander.

Dolan Pardon Opposed by Realty League

Absolute opposition to any move intended to bring about pardons for Edmund L. Dolan and J. Walter Quinn, serving two and a half year sentences for contempt of court for alleged jury-tampering, was registered today by the Real Estate, Owners, and Tenants League of Boston.

Eric A. Nelson, president of the league, telegraphed copies of the protest to Governor Hurley and to all members of the governor's council.

"To release these men at this time would be unprecedented and a disgrace to the commonwealth," the telegrams read. "The crime of which they have been convicted is only a continuance of their previous bad record, consequently they are unworthy of special treatment.

"The taxpayers take satisfaction in knolwing that these men are receiving just punishment for their misdeeds. The governor and the council have no moral right to treat them differently than hundreds of other criminals who have broken our laws.

"Shame on any trusted public official who would even consider granting a pardon to men who have shown no respect for the public niterest in their sworn duty."

The question as to the power of the governor and council to pardon in contempt cases is now being decided by the supreme court.

$7500 Blaze On Waterfront

Groceries and provisions stored in an Atlantic avenue warehouse were damaged to the extent of $7500 by fire of undetermined origin today.

Flames broke out in the first floor of the building, a two-story frame structure, and were prevented from spreading to adjacent warehouses and wharves by prompt work of the firemen. Most of the damage was caused by smoke.

An attic fire in a Joy street, Beacon Hill, apartment building, caused by spontaneous combustion in a pile of oily rags, was quickly quenched. Damage was estimated at $300.

M'Kesson Case Probers Call 50

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (AP)—The federal government issued 50 subpoenas today for Wall Street operators, prominent brokers and officials of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., in its investigation of the reported shortage of $18,000,000 in the giant drug firm's listed assets.

At the same time Julian F. Thompson, treasurer and director of the firm, began telling publicly for the first time the story of how he became suspicious that something was financially wrong with the crude drugs department where the alleged shortage occurred.

Thompson, who already has appeared privately before a New York stock exchange committee and before a federal grand jury, testified at Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr.'s investigation.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Lester E. Dunigan, in charge of the federal inquiry, did not make public the names of those for whom subpoenas were issued.

The firm filed a federal court petition last Thursday to reorganize under the Chandler bankruptcy act. The Securities and Exchange Commission is a party to this proceeding.

The crude drugs department was under the supervision of George E. Dietrich, assistant treasurer, who took orders from F. Donald Coster, president of the firm since 1926.

George Vernard, Montreal representative of W. W. Smith & Co., English agents for the firm, was also ordered arrested. U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter was advised by telephone that Vernard would surrender here today.

Ban Trading In Drug Stock

Trading in stocks and bonds of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., was under ban in Massachusetts today.

Grave Spares 'Beano' Breen Rap in Court

It was easy today for Davio J. "Beano" Breen, to beat a federal rap, because the ex-Boston gambler, although named in a federal conspiracy complaint, is in his grave, victim of an assassin's bullets a year ago.

Two other men named in the alleged conspiracy to possess securities stolen from a postal messenger in New York, were held each in $3000 bail, however, when they appeared before U. S. Commissioner Harry N. Guterman.

They are Warren R. Hopkins, Brookline, and Joseph M. Lydon, Needham, of Lydon, Dien & Co., Boston securities dealers.

The $3800 in securities were part of loot stolen from the messenger on January 12, 1937, in Trinity station of the New York postoffice.

Last week, Lydon was held in $3000 for the federal grand jury, by Commissioner Guterman, when he was charged with possessing the stolen securities.

This bail was allowed to stand for Lydon, and the case on the conspiracy complaint against him and Hopkins was continued to December 28 for hearing.

The complaints charge that Breen, Lydon and Hopkins, on December 11, 1936, entered into a conspiracy to receive, conceal and possess the securities.

Girls Held as 'Fake' Slashers

HALIFAX, England, Dec. 14—This Yorkshire mill city today suffered a sheepish reaction to its "slasher" scare of last month when the crown prosecutor declared in court Scotland Yard agents had learned at least five of the 13 reported attacks were fakes.

Two girls were bound over for trial on charges of causing malicious mischief by slashing themselves.

One said she did it with a penny razorblade because she was angry at her boy friend. The other admitted she had used a comb to inflict a cut because she was "excited" by reports of the "phantom slasher."

In revealing the fakes the prosecutor spoke bitingly of "persons with silly notions."

Amounts of above $100, owed to customers for stock deals, were usually held up by Brown, Anthony and Company, defunct stock brokerage firm, it was testified today in superior court by the company's former cashier, Robert H. Jackson.

His testimony was at the trial of the former partners in the firm, William M. Forgrave, ex-minister and prohibition era dry crusader, and H. Henry Anthony, both charged with larceny from customers.

Jackson, on the witness stand for the second day in the jury-waived trial before Judge Edward T. Broadhurst, also revealed that in the closing days of the firm's existence stocks ordered by the company, to be paid for on delivery, were refused when they were delivered.

It was "an unusual situation," the witness agreed.

The former cashier likewise testified that Forgrave, from January 1 of 1937 to June 29 (the last day the firm was in business) drew a total of $3018.08 from the company, while Anthony drew only $22.03.10 in the same period.

They drew no other money, Jackson said, to his knowledge.

Again today at the trial, women investorswh o allegedly lost money through the brokerage firm, were present.

Some of the women already have testified in the trial.

Today the mercury hit the freezing mark in Greater Boston, with the coldest place in New England reported as Greenville, Me., at 10 above zero. Tonight's Boston low is expected to be from 12 to 15 degrees.

Communism, Dies Target

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 (INS)—A clarion call to the American people to reaffirm the democratic credo of freedom—freedom of thought, speech, religion and pursuit of happiness—as the only means of ridding this nation of alien doctrines, was sounded by Rep. Martin Dies (D.) of Texas, of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Ringing down the curtain on a sweeping investigation into subversive movements in this country, the fiery Texan, in a nationwide radio broadcast, said that the only way to combat Communism, Fascism and Naziism is to promote 100 per cent Americanism.

His committee completes its inquiry this week. Its continuation depends upon a new appropriation from Congress, which Dies said, the committee will seek.

He laid before the American people these specific recommendations which, he said, if followed, will insure preservation of democratic principles:

All liberal organizations must "oppose Communism as sincerely and vigorously as you oppose Fascism and Naziism."

As a people, let us adopt a consistent policy which will condemn the persecution of all classes, whether racial, religious or economic, in every section of the world, but, at the same time, resolve to keep America out of Europe and Europe out of America."

Prompt deportation of Communist, Fascist and Nazi aliens in this country by the labor department. "The failure to deport them is becoming a national scandal."

"To all peddlers of hate, may I suggest that if you will spend one-tenth of your time and money preaching love, cooperation and understanding you will render a far greater service to your country and to your God.

"To those who think more of Russia, Germany, Italy or some other foreign country than they do to the United States, may I suggest that the honest and the decent thing for you to do is to book an early passage to the country of your affection."

Propose Change In Wagner Act

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 14 (AP)—Amendment of the Wagner Act to relieve "maladministration" which he said had aggravated relations between labor and industry was proposed by Rep. Starnes (D.) of Ala.

Changes in the Labor Relations Act to give the right of appeal to "all parties interested" was suggested by the Alabama congressman during a discussion of the Dies committee investigation of un-American activities.

G. O. P. Polled 47.8 P. C. Vote in House Contests

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 (AP)—A countrywide compilation showed today that Democrats polled 49 per cent of the vote for members of the House of Representatives in the Nov. 8 election. Republicans received 47.8 per cent, and minor party candidates 3.2 per cent.

The Democratic figure fell from 60.2 per cent of the party's Presidential vote in 1936 and 53.4 per cent of the vote for Representatives in 1934.

The tabulation, compiled principally from officially-certified returns showed the 1938 vote for representatives aggregated 35,815,720. This was the largest ever recorded in an off-year election. Democratic candidates received 17,559,081 votes, Republicans 17,129,557, and other candidates 1,272,083.

Republicans achieved their greatest gains in the Eastand Mid-West, polling 51 per cent of the vote in both sections. In 1936, they received only 40.4 per cent of the presidential vote in the East, and on 1934 they polled 43.3 per cent of the vote for representatives.

In the midwest, the part received only 34.4 per cent of the 1936 vote and 43.3 per cent of the 1934 vote.

Democrats maintained pluralities in the West, with 51.9 per cent of the total vote, and in the South, with 77.3 per cent.

official of the Commonwealth other than yourself."

After Dever had concluded questioning Dean, he asked the commissioner if he desired to make any further statement, to which Dean replied:

"I am under the impression that much of the Foster Company contract is based on the 20 per cent plus cost feature, rather than on the 10 per cent. The Foster Company expended $150,000 on a 20 per cent plus cost basis, which amounts to three-tenths of 1 cent on $1000 valuation.

"I wonder whether that insignificant sum is worth quibbling about. I have no defense to make for my action. The first night that I slept following the hurricane was the night that the Foster contract was signed. If I were in the same position again I'd do exactly what I did in this instance."

HARD TO BID ON JOB

Dean told the committee that after the Foster Company employes had made a survey of the damage done to state forests in the western part of the state the company wrote him that the only manner in which they would be willing to do the work was on a cost plus 20 per cent basis, as the work was of such a character that it would be impossible to bid accurately on it.

"At the time I thought 20 per cent was rather higher than I expected to pay but there was a terrible emergency and the work had to be done at once, so I did not hesitate to sign the contract on that basis. I assumed the responsibility and went ahead on the best terms I could make."

"Was the contract taken up by the legislative committee on ways and means?" asked Dever.

"I sent the contract over to the committee and the committee had it at least 24 hours before I appeared before it. Then committee permitted me to spend $40,000 on a 20 per cent cost plus basis and the balance of $460,000 on a cost plus 10 per cent basis."

4 Points of Freedom Meeting's Key

Elaborate ceremonies, featured by prominent statesmen and civic leaders, will commemorate the 147th anniversary of the Bill of Rights in Faneuil Hall tomorrow night—ceremonies with the added zest of stirring music and entertainment.

From Hollywood tonight the nation will hear a coast-to-coast NBC broadcast re-dedicating Americans to Americanism; re-dedicating themselves to their great individual rights: free worship, free speech, free press and the right to assemble and criticize public officials.

"Hearty commendation is due those citizens who have arranged patriotic exercises in Faneuil Hall tomorrow night.

"As we learn what is going on in other countries of the world we can appreciate more than ever the foresight and the wisdom of our forefathers in incorporating the Bill of Rights in our Constitution freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of religion. They are something more than mere phrases.

GREAT SYMBOL

"Let us remember—

"Our security, our freedom and our happiness."

"Educators would be remiss in their duty if they did 'not' espouse the re-dedication of the Bill of Rights in support of democracy.

"The history of education presents many [illegible] pages written by dictators. Too frequently have the very fundamentals of intellectual growths and expansion been stifled.

"Invariably it is the underprivileged who have been denied that God-given right to follow the clear, golden beacon of education.

"The dictator knows that in education alone lies his ruin. He realizes that as soon as subjects appreciate their servile state his end is near.

"He more than any one else, knows that in the hallowed halls of schools and colleges this is accomplished first. He is convinced that the school master is the greatest conquerer of all—because he uses no army. His triumph is in the minds of his students everlasting."

"She's incorrigible," commented Judge Francis J. W. Ford as he sentenced her to 18 months in the women's reformatory at Aldreson, Mass.

In imposing the sentence Judge Ford revoked the five years' probation given her in federal court in 1936, and revoked the two-year suspended sentence, giving her credit for the four months she served in New York.

The original sentence here was on a charge of Mann Act violation involving petty Margaret Toth who at the age of 15 was alleged to [illegible] from Passaic, N. J., to Boston and placed in a Brookline house.

It was Margaret Toth's testimony that sent Hetty Spencer's husband, Harry, to a federal penitentiary for five years. Alfred Shehan, 35, of Passaic drew a like sentence as the man who allegedly sold Margaret into bondage in Brookline.

Calls Warehouse Strike Illegal

Denouncing the business agent of Warehousemen No. 829, for calling a strike among warehousemen at the A. & P. plant in Somerville, President John M. Sullivan of the Teamsters Union Local 25, today declared his men would do everything possible to facilitate deliveries for the company.

He termed the strike not only illegal but harmful to unions and unionism everywhere, and charged the agent had defied his supervisors.

Sullivan stated that the international president of the union had arranged for a week's postponement while negotiating with the company. There was a promise that if wage increases were agreed to they would be retroactive, he added, so the men called out had nothing to gain.

Say 15 Nazis Die for Plot On Hitler

LONDON, Dec. 14 (INS)—The London weekly periodical "News-Review" today published a sensational report that 15 high German officers had been executed recently following the discovery of a plot against Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

"News-Review" alleged that the officers planned to raid the German chancellor's home near Berchtesgaden seize Hitler and assassinate him "if necessary."

vance to stay away from the dinner.

SCHACHT REBUFFED

Despite Nazi press retorts to Chamberlain, a Berlin foreign office spokesman said the speech did not distort the general line of appeasement along which Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler embarked at Munich Sept. 29.

Dr. Schacht, however, had been in London only a few hours before he himself received an indirect rebuff from the executive committee of Earl Baldwin's fund for refugees.

In a statement the committee said it had no intention of discussing with him a reported plan for transferring funds it collected to Germany to facilitate the emigration of German Jews.

Chamberlain dodged several supplementary questions pertaining to French-British relations and Italian agitation that began Nov. 30 concerning French territory.

CITES FRENCH TIES

He refused to answer a question by Geoffrey L. Mander, National Liberal member of Britain and France, during recent general staff conversations had made necessary arrangements for joint defenses.

(On Monday Chamberlain told the House no specific pact obligated Britain to aid France if Italy attacked her. Last night, however, he said:

"Our relations with France are so close as to pass beyond mere legal obligations since they are founded on an identity of interest.")

Prime Minister Chamberlain's questioning [illegible] Mander's questions.

Meanwhile the labor party fired a question in the House for explanation of the absence of the German ambassador and Nazi press representatives from the dinner.

This likely will be followed by lengthy review of British-German relations during the foreign affairs debate on Monday, before the Christmas recess.

The Germans declined invitations to the important dinner, attended by many ambassadors after reading advance copies of Chamberlain's speech.

U. S. Sailor Held By Nazis as Spy

Vatican Checks Report of Nazi Anti-Church Aim

By FRANK GERVASI

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service.)

ROME, Dec. 14—The Vatican has asked its apostolic delegate in Berlin to ascertain the truth regarding reports that Germany contemplates a drastic new series of anti-church laws, International News Service learned today.

The eight points of the alleged series of measures follow:

1. The 1933 Vatican-Berlin concordat to be abrogated.
2. Religious propaganda to be forbidden in the Reich.
3. Religious bodies guilty of alleged immorality can be dissolved and possessions confiscated.
4. Correspondence between Pope Pius XI and German bishops must pass through German government hands.
5. Religious orders may no longer minister to sick or teach in Germany.
6. Religious orders will be strictly government-organized and finances controlled.
7. Germans will be forbidden to contribute to religious orders.
8. Priests will be forbidden to baptize Jews and "Non-Aryan" Germans will be forbidden to enter the priesthood.

Nazis to Rebuild Turkish Synagogue

VIENNA, Dec. 14 (AP)—Nazi authorities agreed today to rebuild one of the 20 synagogues they destroyed in the outburst against Jews last month.

They will restore at their own expense a temple used by Turkish Jews, the authorities said. Jewish circles interpreted this as an effort to court the favor of Turkey.

See Memel Grab in Nazi Plea

BERLIN, Dec. 14 (AP)—Berlin diplomatic quarters expressed the belief today that annexation of Memel territory by Adolf Hitler's greater Germany is but a matter of weeks.

Events were believed moving at such a fast pace that Hitler might be able to call the Reichstag together January 30—the sixth anniversary of his rise to power—to welcome 150,000 Memel Germans into the Third Reich.

Diplomatic quarters felt that conditions had ripened within the 1919 cession miles of territory, which Lithuania took from Germany after the World War, for a decisive step late in January when the new Reichstag meets.

It was believed that the almost unanimous German diet elected Sunday or the vote of the people's council to Germandom would [illegible] the vote by voting that Memel belongs to Germany.

In that case Hitler would be invited to step in these quarters reasoned, on the basis that it was the will of the people of Memel.

This would not be out of line with Hitler's declaration after the annexation of Sudetenland that the Nazis had no further territorial claims in Europe.

The situation would be one in which Memel Nazis would plead with Hitler to come to them—a plea which he could hardly ignore.

"That is what happened in Austria as well as Sudetenland, and it worked to perfection in both cases.

...sells slim neck and clenched them until she ceased to breathe.

FAMOUS CASE

Those two words were next to last out of the courtroom in the fatal story that she told of throat spasms induced by the setting in her larynx of a piece of the coal tooth.

There is no comparison with such words. They are easy to hear.

It was a famous case. Nearly everybody presents a murderer in an understandable light.

Only a few hours of swift action, then in detail the part played in it by Doctor Magrath, whose brief time on the witness stand was his first test when he was called to the stand in the Lizzie Borden case in the newspapers of 1892 and 1893. Now he is dead, one sunday night at Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital of a heart attack during a rehearsal of the retelling of these great tales.

Young Hathaway, serving a life sentence at Cranston prison, is the son of Mr and Mrs. Louis E. Hathaway of Fall River. Mr. Hathaway is a former state representative. Elliot has a twin brother, Alden.

VICTIM STUDENT NURSE

Alma Russell was a daughter of Carl K. Russell a Providence, R. I. lumberman. She was a pretty, and a student nurse at the Truesdale hospital, near Fall River. Elliott had a date with the girl the night of March 23, 1931. He had proposed that they go to Providence, but there wasn't time, she had to be back at the hospital by 10 o'clock. There was a common hunting gun and a pretty party.

Hathaway bought the ginger ale and paper cups at a Fall River drug store. From a Fall River bootlegger he obtained a pint of gin. The Hathaway car was then pointed out the Stafford road.

Over the line in Rhode Island he turned the car off the road into Winward Line frequented by young lovers, drove in quite a way, stopped and snapped off the lights. Some time later a frightened, trembling girl ran to a farm that his words implied was not together. Hathaway appeared at the home of Victor Luck Galvin, a pal.

BABBLED STORY

He babbled his story incoherently. He had struck her, he said, that was all. He had struck her only once. It didn't make sense. Why was she so quiet? Why didn't she get up and go home with him? Something terrible, horrible must have happened.

Galvin didn't believe him . . .

More gin now and the two boys went back together to where Hathaway had left the body of the girl. They had tied it down in the old dark night.

Now again was scared.

"Let's get out of here" he chattered, and they drove away at top speed.

What happened later Hathaway tried to blame on Galvin. He said he had asked him to get away anywhere anyhow and to stay away until the investigation was over. Galvin did this he said for fear that he would be involved in the crime. This Galvin denied, and during the trial there was a pretty spectacle of the two voicing recriminations each against the other.

Hathaway ran away and there was a manhunt. He went to New York. He changed his name. He tried to alter his appearance. Wherever he went, whatever he did there at his elbow was the specter of the dead girl.

Finally one of the motor cops warm, found him in Boston, near the Tip street police station, and as the story goes he was telephone ... went through to Rhode Island's attorney general Benjamin M. Lewis. It was Hathaway's own confession.

He was charged with murder. Attorneys rushed over to Providence and charged with murder. A struggle between ... Massachusetts ... Rhode Island ...

Boston After Dark

By GEORGE HOLLAND

IF A STATE HOUSE SHUFFLE now in the making wins a favorable preview from the Executive Council, Governor Hurley will appoint Mayor Edward Voke of Chelsea to the Board of Public Utilities . . . And the Governor's former secretary, Francis McKeown, will be relieved of his place on the utilities board to become clerk of court in his home town, Springfield . . .

George Holland

Vaudeville returns to Boston Christmas Day with the RKO Boston becoming the city's only variety stand once more . . . An early booking (second week in January) will be that of Abbott and Costello, a team of male comedians which captivated New York at the Casa Manana . . .

Why America Needs a Larger Navy" will be Senator David I. Walsh's subject in a talk tonight to members of the Naval Order of the United States at the old Boston Yacht Club station, T Wharf . . . And in the assembly hall of South Boston High School tonight, Coach Steve White and his undefeated-for-two seasons football club will find the old grads out in force.

It will be a banquet and District Attorney William J. Foley, who didn't miss a game all season, will be present as the team's Fan No. 1 . . .

The dope really believes that the Peninsula kids could stand off more than a few of the New England college clubs . . . The South Boston star, Lydon, will go to Fordham next year . . .

Another event of the evening will be Jack Dempsey's appearance at Revere City Hall, under the wing of Jimmy Mede, to meet Mayor-elect Lawrence Gillis and not less than 1500 youngsters . . . Jack arrived in town late last night . . . The former champ deployed at once to the Mayfair for a midnight snack . . . Max Waxman, Joe Linsey and Sam Price were with him . . . The Dempsey party lost its way travelling from Holyoke to Worcester early yesterday morning . . . In Uxbridge, where Jack and his pals stopped at a dining-car, the former heavyweight champ was recognized . . . An excited citizen got on the phone and in less than 10 minutes a police chief, a reporter, a preacher, the town's Joe Morgan and a bookmaker had made their appearance for a round of handshaking . . . Dempsey swears to the truth of the incident and, although he's a famous ribber, Jack finds his fun in other ways than playing with the truth . . . The champ's hobby, according to Linsey, is experimenting with his friends to discover if they'll come apart . . . He crunches their fingers, bends back their thumbs and twists their ears . . . Playfully

More Truth, S'Help Me:

At the risk of losing what reputation the column may have for verity, here's a happening of last night along the Rialto which readers would be justified—times as they are—in refusing to believe . . . But Paul, the head waiter; Al, a waiter; Alex Finn, the proprietor, and the cashier of the Mayfair vouch for it . . .

A gentleman with an English accent was host to a small party which consumed $26 worth of food and beverage . . . He glanced at the tab, reached in his pocket and passed the waiter four bills to square the account . . . The waiter examined the bills and rushed to the cashier for advice . . . They were a pair of century notes and two $50 bills . . The guest was given $274 in change . . . Then he explained that it was his first visit to a Boston night club and that he had deciphered the check as reading $260 . . .

The Briton was quite sober . . . He's the managing director of an English liquor firm Things must be good over there.

Once Over Lightly:

Another Boston performer who's booked for Bernie's show is Johnny Johnston, who appears for two nights, January 13 and 14 . . .

The booking was made to fill in two nights which Mal Hallett had booked before he signed the papers for a long engagement beginning January 6 . . . "It's All Yours," the Dwight Wiman show, starring Ethel Merman and Jimmy Durante, will be a late January Boston attraction

TWO WAYS TO NOWHERE

The Editor Says:

Raising the costs of American products while at the same time lowering the costs of competing foreign products by reducing tariff rates spells to industrial stagnation and not to prosperity.

In effect, that is the warning of two eminent spokesmen for New England industries, Mr. Edward H. Cotty, manager of the Massachusetts Economics Association, and Mr. Russell T. Firestone, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers.

But, while we view with pessimism Secretary Hull's tariff slashing treaties with the British Empire and eighteen other countries.

Both men wisely recognize the fact that the MORE commodities we import the FEWER jobs we can provide for our own people.

There is the patriotic and sensible attitude. Certainly American industries ought to be enabled to pay American wages and earn fair profits. With so many millions of our citizens jobless and "on relief" we cannot and surely ought not to play Santa Claus to the world's backward nations.

It is to be hoped that the new Congress will stand on its own feet, take back its treaty making powers, and halt the exportation of the prosperity so necessary to New England as a section and to the country as a whole.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY! When Congress turns its attention to taxes it should begin a revision DOWNWARDS if we expect business to turn UPWARDS during the next year.

That was clearly the MANDATE OF THE PEOPLE in the last election.

The dissatisfaction expressed at that time was a dissatisfaction with the LOW returns for the HIGH taxes levied on most earnings.

Taxation for revenue purposes in the last five years is the greatest menace that today confronts our people.

Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the School of Journalism of Columbia University put this menace in the following words in a recent address:

"The power to tax plus the power to regulate may destroy the freedom of public opinion and make a dictatorship inevitable. In time it may be necessary for government to take over all agencies of public opinion in order to maintain its power to tax and regulate."

Thus we are confronted with a DOUBLE MENACE in taxation for the purpose of maintaining quasi-socialistic political machines:

1. IMPOVERISHING AND, ULTIMATELY, the LOSS OF OUR LIBERTIES!

The MUST become the will of the people. The mandate is clear and very plain:

TAKE THE TAX WEIGHTS OFF OF OUR SHOULDERS!"

WHAT WAS once Austria happy Vienna is a thrill to lay of terror and mystery. Men of the most wealth and power have suddenly disappeared.

That is the latest development.

What has happened to these men?

What has happened to former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, that brave little man who preferred prison or death to a dishonorable deal with Hitler?

What has happened to Baron Louis Rothschild of the great banking family? No sooner had Herr Hitler's goose stepping soldiers entered Vienna than Baron Rothschild was arrested and shuttled away.

The Brighter Side

Writers Get Crumbs From Film Table

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1933, by [illegible] International Copyright and [illegible]

WE NOTE in the public prints that some of the stockholders of a movie making concern are beefing in court about the way the outfit has been tossing gobs of money in bonuses and salaries to stars, directors and executives the past six years. A matter of $30,000,000 is involved.

IT HAS been brought out that one producer and director is guaranteed $300,000 per year under a secret contract, to which we say more power to him. If there is one thing we are never going to kick about it is somebody making money if they're doing it honestly and no dishonesty can be suggested in the instance mentioned. The fellow ain't what he eat he was worth and got it.

However in contemplating this and other big salaries paid in the movie game we are somewhat confused by the Hollywood logic that makes the boys out there so reluctant to pay any real money for the one ingredient absolutely necessary to making the big salaries possible and to keeping the industry itself alive and that is the picture story.

A movie magnate may hire a director at $100,000, or better, and a single star at $250,000 and then he shops around the five-and-ten, so to speak, for a story for a picture on which he hopes to gross at least a couple of millions.

IT IS TRUE that many story writers in Hollywood receive all the way from $200 to $2000 a week for the weeks they work, and nobody is going to butt into learn over folks getting that kind of money. But what does it amount to compared to the salaries paid the fellows who would be helpless without the story?

You would think the scale would be the other way around.

The movies apparently love bargains in stories, though they do not look for bargains in any other merchandise department that enters into the making of a picture. A magnate may find himself with a $100,000 director and a $250,000 star for a picture and may come upon a story that seems to fit them both but if the story writer should suggest $50,000 as a fair price for him against the profits of the picture, do you know what would happen? Why the poor magnate would have a nervous breakdown, that is what would happen.

WHEN HE recovered he would go looking for another story that he could get so much and eventually find one of course and while it might not be as good a story as the one the $50,000 fellow offered and might mean the difference between an ordinary picture and a positive panic, the magnate could congratulate himself on saving almost as much as he might lose by a pair of deuces in the next draw game.

That is where the logic of Hollywood escapes us. We cannot see the sense of scaling one side so high and the other side so low, just as a business proposition. If it does not do producers of small fees it would be a different matter but when their enormous salaries are dependent entirely on the story writers should be rewarded in kind.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HIGHWAY HORRORS . . . automobiles taking a deadlier toll than the guns of battle. Who's to blame? Here's a couple of [illegible] opinions.

THE ROAD HOG!" storms Mrs. H. A. Deierling of Sacramento. "Why [illegible] fast drivers [illegible] penalties and debits? My husband is a good driver, accepts a share of the open highway, has never had an accident, and is fully covered by insurance. But when we are caught behind an old crock of a car, idling along at 20 miles per hour, it surely burns us up.

There is far greater danger in the slow, aimless driver of an old car than in those who drive at a reasonable rate of speed and are quite sure of [illegible]

AFTER A CAR IS FIVE YEARS OLD THE LICENSE FEE SHOULD BE DOUBLED EACH YEAR. IF THIS SEEMS UNFAIR TO POORER PEOPLE, WE COULD BUILD TWO HIGHWAYS ONE FOR THE 20-MILERS AND THE OTHER FOR THE 40-MILERS AND UP. TAKE THE JUNK HEAPS OFF THE HIGHWAYS AND IT WILL BE LOTS SAFER!"

Excess speed is the cause of most traffic fatalities. Automobile manufacturers are [illegible] murderers by making their cars so fast and powerful!

SPEED and POWER are the two words most stressed by auto salesmen although they know full well that before many weeks have gone past the car may be spattered with the blood of a maniac at the wheel or some innocent victim!

One law should prohibit the manufacture of automobiles that can exceed the usual [illegible] limit of 50 miles an hour on the open highway! Or better still, have an [illegible] speed governor worn on all cars and impose a severe penalty if anyone other than an official inspector tampers with the governor.

ROAD HOG or speed fiend . . . seems to me it simmers down to this, neighbors. It's neither the MILEAGE nor MAKE that counts BUT THE MAN BEHIND THE WHEEL. The trouble lies in OUR LICENSE laws. We look for the MECHANICAL AGE of the motor . . . but we have not yet got to the point where we test the MENTAL AGE of its owner.

How fit is that owner to drive any machine? Is he a grouch who vents his spleen by highway hecking . . . or a neurotic weakling who blows up in a crisis . . . or a hearty human who knows how to give and take?

There are youngsters of sixteen who are sufficiently mature to handle an automobile in any crisis . . . and there are gentlemen of 60 who aren't fit to operate a scooter.

SEVERE PSYCHIATRIC TESTS AND HONEST BANK BALANCES SHOULD BE A PART OF EVERY LICENSE TEST. NO PERSON SHOULD BE GRANTED A LICENSE WHO IS NOT FIT, MENTALLY, TO [illegible] OR ABLE, FINANCIALLY, TO COMPENSATE FOR ANY DAMAGE THAT MAY BE DONE.

Sez I! And now, sez you . . .?

LYN TERRIS AND GREGORY MAAK MIX BALLET WITH YOUR DEMI-TASSE
Night Clubbers Give Cheers to Classical

Girl About Town

by Marguerite Downey

IF YOU CAN take ballet with your demi-tasse, Gregory Maak and Lyn Terris, classical dance team, currently appearing at the Bradford Penthouse, will give it to you.

They're a couple of enthusiastic juveniles revolutionizing night club entertainment by introducing concert dancing. Lyn was born Hely Ferris of Quincy. Gregory's surname is MacDougall and his hometown's Framingham.

Both are students at the Hans Weiner studio, where Greg is an assistant. Not only do they plan their own choreography, but Greg's hobby of sculpturing is a source of inspiration for some unusual costume designing and mask making.

From the applause received, indications are that night clutters are catering for the classics, not for swing. So prepare to kiss the chorines [illegible] instead of having a riot [illegible] head dished up with your after-dinner brandy, it's a few Russian leaps you'll be rating.

SINCE SCOTT'S Stamp Catalogue listed postal cards the hobby of collecting them has tripled in interest. Edward Elder of Washington [illegible] one of the most enthusiastic. He's turned the pastime into money and any day can get $35 for an old manila one-cent kind issued back in 1875.

Former Police Commissioner Joseph Leonard peppers his collecting mania with humor. When going out of town he collects a heap of them, the fancy kind with sparkling roofs and pictures of gay ninety beauties. He sends them back home with printed messages but no signatures. A slight delay in the mails is the first thought of most recipients.

ERNEST BALZARINI, the Copley-Plaza's head bus boy, may have waited on the Kaiser and Queen Victoria, but his choicest memories are his Sunday school hours spent with Pope Pius XI.

That was over sixty years ago in St. Stephen's Church in Milan. The Pope was twenty years old [illegible] was slightly younger, but claims he could always be depended upon to finish last.

THE BLIZZARD of Christmas mail has swept in on Bethlehem, N. H. But the peaceful little town isn't the only one deluged with sentimental folk who want their gifts and cards mailed with [illegible] postmark.

There are seven to choose from, in Connecticut, Georgia, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Kentucky. The last state goes a step further using a holly brush and a mistletoe for its post-mark.

THIS IS INFORMATION: Eileen Balfe, the wealthy society girl [illegible] being protected night and day by G-Men, because of a kidnap threat two months ago. The plot to "snatch" her was regarded as so serious that she has been staying close to the family fireside, and when she does go out—even to dinner with friends—four G-Men go with her! . . . Joe Kennedy, Jr., the Ambassador's eldest son, is carrying the torch for Ariane Allen, the pretty model, who just got back in the U. S. A. . . . NBC is being sued for $20,000 by a girl who claims she had the program title "Information Please" in active use over a year ago . . . Attorney Samuel Leibowitz, who has been notoriously successful with insanity defenses in murder cases, will present the next Legislature with a bill which, if passed, will outlaw insanity defenses! It's patterned after the Briggs Law in Massachusetts . . . The police department is scrutinizing the local escort bureaus with a view to clamping down on some of the gigolo services. THERE WAS a news photographer in the death chamber at the electrocution of Anna Marie Hahn in Columbus. He had his camera strapped around his middle. Just as he clicked a picture of the woman in the chair someone stood up in front of him . . . An enterprising Chicago newspaper offered to pay Mrs. Hahn $1000 for a last minute confession . . . Gracie Allen, who is pretty now, is planning to have her nose bobbed . . .

LOCAL ITEMS: Dolly de Milhan, the social pretty, has sold a scenario to MGM entitled "The Lady and the Waiter." Nelson Eddy will star in it . . . If the scheduled entertainment plans go through, the elaborate Marion Cooley-Hans Wagen party at the Ritz-Carlton is expected to Have People Talking.

DEBS AND young society matrons who get their names in the papers are being annoyed by a mysterious telephone caller who rings up in the middle of the night and insults them. The police have had almost a hundred complaints in the midtown district . . .

TALK AROUND TOWN: Mary Eastman, the CBS soprano, and her husband, a motor buggy executive, are planning to adopt a baby girl . . . Walter Abel, who is tired of Hollywood and the parts he got there, is coming here to do a play . . . When the new film, "Trade Winds," appears at the Music Hall shortly, New Yorkers will see the first directional effort of Mayor LaGuardia. When His Honor was in Hollywood a few months ago he visited Director Tay Garnett's set and was allowed to direct Fredric March and Joan Bennett in a few scenes . . .

THE BOOK King George VI is reading in bed these nights is Seymour Berkson's "Their Majesties!" The volume was banned before publication in England, but an American friend smuggled a copy through to His Majesty . . . Lily Dache is frightening her friends with a new pet—a Peruvian Cavy. It's a weird champagne-colored little animal, a cross between a rabbit and a pekingese. It drinks no water and eats only salad.

TAG LINE: A group of Hollywood lads were discussing a report that one of the celluloid dream men (a really handsome one) was going to be cast in a prizefight picture.

"What are they going to do," asked a writer, "PAINT muscles on him?"

Have You Planned Christmas Meals

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX—11:30 A. M.

Does your heart skip a beat when you pause to think that in ten days you'll be in a frenzy of last minute preparation for Christmas?

Here's our Christmas dinner menu and we hope to be able to pass along many more suggestions before the eventful day.

CHRISTMAS DINNER MENU

Cider Cocktail Butter Wafers
Cream of Celery Soup Ripe Olives Salted Nuts
Roast Goose with Onion Stuffing
Jellied Cranberry Sauce Apple Sauce
Creamed Onions
Mashed Potatoes Candied Yams
Pickled Red Cabbage Buttered Green Beans
Hot Rolls
Christmas Wreath Dessert
Coffee
Candy Nuts Raisins

Now for the Christmas goose!

ROAST GOOSE.

Singe, clean, remove fat from neck and cut off neck at body, wash and dry. Rub inside and outside with salt and pepper. Brush with a cut clove of garlic, if desired. Fill cavities loosely, (allow room for expansion) with Potato Stuffing, Celery Stuffing, Fruit Stuffing, Apple Stuffing, or Onion Stuffing. Fasten openings by sewing or with skewers and fold skin back over back and fasten with skewer. Truss and place on rack in roasting pan. Prick skin well with sharp fork to let fat run out.

Place in very hot oven (450 to 475 deg. F.) for 20 to 25 minutes, then reduce heat quickly to slow (300 to 325 deg. F.) and continue roasting. Allow 20 to 25 minutes per pound for roasting. Add 1 cup hot water after first 30 minutes of roasting, if desired, and baste at 20 minute intervals. Most cooks contend that basting is unnecessary because goose is so fat.

The gravy is made as you would make turkey gravy, using chopped giblets and giblet stock.

NOTE: We prefer to roast with a cover, basting, drawing off fat from time to time.

APPLE STUFFING.

10 sour apples
1 cup raisins
Peel, quarter, and core the apples, then mix them with the currants and use as a stuffing.

ONION STUFFING.

2 cups stock or bouillon
6 cups bread crumbs
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg, if desired
4 teaspoons sage
2 teaspoons poultry seasoning
4 large onions, chopped
¼ cup butter or meat drippings
½ cup chopped celery tops, if desired
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 cup raisins

Pour bouillon over bread crumbs, add slightly beaten eggs and seasonings. Saute onions and celery in fat until lightly browned; add parsley and raisins and mix thoroughly with seasoned crumbs.

Doctor's Wife Shocks Village Women

CHAPTER 44

Katie stayed for a week. Chris, watching her, knew that she had intended to stay longer. She had unpacked all her bags, set out the innumerable trifles which were important to her. In the mornings, he would hear Mrs. Miller carrying up a tray, and sometimes a word or two of conversation.

"I don't know as there's enough water for your bath, Mrs. Arden. I'm washing today."

"Well, so am I. The washing can wait."

There was constant conflict between them over such small matters as the food, the service, even Katie's bed.

"If this is the food you've been giving Doctor Arden, no wonder he looks thin."

"Maybe he's got other things than his meals to worry him."

Katie tried, he knew. They both tried. But the life was too much for her. Sitting at the table, she would make talk of this house party or that; and one day out of a clear sky she said she had seen Beverly that summer.

"Where was that?"

"Bar Harbor. She wasn't going out much. Just taking walks and things like that."

She dismissed Beverly then as if she did not count; but she could not dismiss this burial alive which was Chris' life now. She kept on trying for a while. One afternoon Amy and the other daughters-in-law paid a formal call, and Katie watched them from a window as they came across the fields.

"Here comes the missionary society!"

"They've been pretty good to me."

Probably laying up treasure in heaven.

Nevertheless she did her best that day to be friendly, and it was not entirely her fault that she found they sat there in Letitia's stiff parlor, stiff in her stout hair, her carefully made-up face and her painted fingernails and found little or nothing to say to her. They left with evident relief and Katie collapsed into a chair and lighted a cigarette.

"Well," she said hopefully, "that's one ordeal. I didn't pass!"

THE FATAL QUESTION

One day Katie came home from a walk in her stocking feet, her shoes and stockings in her hands. Chris, who was reading, looked up at her in astonishment.

"I'm not mad. I've got a lot of things I've said. I've walked and paved roads and paths. And you don't really want me here, do you?"

He moved a little but Katie he said slowly, "why did you take that letter of mine, years ago? The one from Beverly Lewis?"

She looked terrified. The color drained out of her face. "What letter? I don't know what you are talking about!"

"Then it doesn't matter," he said quietly. "When do you want to leave here? Tomorrow?"

She was still frightened, he knew, when she went up to bed, and she left the next morning. He knew that she was taking herself out of his life for good.

He tried to feel some regret when he kissed her. In a sense he did at that. She was the last tie he had to his former life. She had destroyed him, doubly destroyed him; but she was Katie, and once she had loved him.

"Good-bye, my dear; and be happy."

She looked at him. "Happy!" she said. "With my life knocked to pieces! I suppose I just don't understand you, Chris. Maybe I never did."

She went away on that, not looking back, leaving him alone in that dying garden, with his useless hand tucked in his pocket, with the wind ruffling his hair, and with a strange, tormented look in the eyes which followed her until she was out of sight.

Now at last he was alone, stripped bare of everything, even his pride. That night for the first and only time since he had been appointed to the hospital staff, he drank himself into a stupor. Then and only then he managed to sleep.

Katie got her divorce in Reno that fall. She went to Chris asking for it, and he drew against his rapidly diminishing bank balance to finance it. He sent the check and then went for a long walk through the bare farm lands.

He had let Katie go her headstrong way, too busy and too self-engrossed to check her. There had been good stuff in her, and he had let her go.

A CALL FOR HELP

Fourteen years. For fourteen years Chris had loved one woman, and for most of that time he had been married to another one. The human heart was a strange thing, he thought. It could go through the gestures of love with one woman and yet hold the image of another. It craved freedom and yet dreaded to be alone; and he who had craved freedom for so long now had it, and it meant nothing to him.

Another phase of his life began that same night.

He was ready for bed and about to take the final drink which would allow him to escape when he heard the banging of an old car coming up his neglected driveway, and went down to the door. One of the village men was there, a worried little man, to say that his baby had the croup, and would the doctor look at the child.

"My wife's scared, Doctor. I don't like to bother you, but if you'd come and take a look—"

"I'm not practicing; but I'll come, of course."

He went upstairs to throw on some clothes, and on his table sat that bottle of his. He stood for a moment surveying it. Then he went deliberately to the window and upended it.

When he went downstairs again, there was a grim smile on his face. "All right," he said. "Let's go."

He picked up his bag with his left hand and went out into the cool darkness.

He spent most of that night by the child's bed in a small village house, content to be there, to hear the long crowing intake of air grow less stertorous and change into normal breathing, until finally the baby slept.

When at last he emerged into the dusk of a winter dawn, his face showed fatigue, but there was a new set to his shoulders. Once more he had made a fight—small as it was—and won it.

He buried the empty bottle that day in Letitia's garden along with several of its fellows. That phase was over, thank God!

But if one was over, another was beginning. The news went around the countryside that he was available, and little by little after that the country people began to come in. He had no hours, there was no sign on that door of David's. But they came, afoot, in ancient buggies, in mud spattered cars.

At first he made no charge. Then, finding that this hurt their pride, he let them pay him old David's prices: a dollar for an office call, two dollars for a visit. At the end of the first month he found he had taken in $20, and was instantly back to those first days of practice in the city, and his statement to Beverly that he had made the same amount.

NOEL RETURNS

Noel, coming home that year for Christmas, found him cheerful and more talkative. His right arm still hung useless for all practical purposes, but he was increasingly adept with the left. The boy helped him in the office, interested and filled with importance.

"Now watch this, Noel. Catch the end, will you? Righto. Hold it tight. That's the way."

The bandage would go on, snug and sleek with the boy's help, and like the bandage Chris felt his hold on life tightening.

He added another Christmas to his list that winter, with Hiram and Noel cutting down a tree in the wood lot, and Chris joining them, to carry it home; the horses brisk with the cold air, the tree on the sledge scraping along a snowy lane, and the two men and the boy trudging along beside it.

That night they trimmed the tree, and at last Hiram mounted the ladder and placed an ancient and dilapidated angel on the top. When at last he came down, he looked around him sheepishly.

"The old man always said a prayer about now," he said. "We might just be quiet for a minute anyhow."

Chris missed Noel when he went back to school. But he was increasingly busy. The country people came in increasing numbers. Sometimes at night a car or a buggy would stop under his window and he would find himself jolting through the darkness.

Something hard and tight in his chest began to soften; his smile was more spontaneous, his voice more gentle. Here again were the intimate contacts of his early days in practice. It did not matter that he was still earning less than it cost him to live. What mattered was that he had found a place for himself, small as it was.

But he was lonely, lonely as he had never been before in his life. There were long hours, empty even of sound, for Mrs. Miller went home after his early supper.

Snow came again in January, clogging the roads, banking up against his windows and cutting off most of his outlying cases. He cut a path to the woodhouse and one to Mrs. Miller's cottage, but with one arm it was slow, heavy work. He would put a foot against the shovel, push it under the snow, and loosen it. Then a little at a time he could lift it out of the way. His back ached at night with weariness, his hand showed blisters; but he kept doggedly on.

Then just as he had finished the snow melted leaving his work for nothing. The roads turned into seas of mud, the paths became small streams of water. Mrs. Miller, plowing along her road, caught a cold which turned into pneumonia, and he had a long fight for her life.

"I'M HERE, CHRIS"

It was on a day when Mrs. Miller was still sick and things had gone very badly indeed that he opened the front door to find the village taxi driving away and Beverly on the porch.

"I'm here, Chris," she said simply. "What are you going to do with me?"

He stood still, looking at her. "Do with you, my darling?" he said. "I'm going to love you all my life, and I'm going to send you back by the next train."

But he opened the door, and she came in. She did not look about her—like Katie. She looked only at him, and suddenly there in the hall she put her arms around him and laid her head quietly on his shoulder.

"My poor Chris," she said. "Don't send me away. I couldn't bear it. Isn't it time I stayed, Chris? Isn't it time, darling?"

Chris held Beverly there against his shabby coat, held her as if he could never let her go again. Then he groaned and released her. She was very pale, and suddenly she sat down on one of Letitia's old hall chairs as though she could not stand. She tried to smile, however.

"It wasn't easy to do this, Chris."

"Just sit there, darling. Sit there and let me look at you. I've wanted to see you, God knows; but now that you're here, what am I to do with you?" he said. "You can't stay. I'm alone here, Beverly."

A Hot Spot in a Chilly World

Austen Lake:

Portrait of a Million Dollars' Worth of Girl

SONJA HENIE, BLONDE, BLAND AND DIMPLED, sat in the cushioned comfort of the Garden's private thirst-parlor—$1,000,000 worth of luscious female from the tip of her suede slippers to the crown of her turbaned curls. Mumma Henie, prim and austere, sat like the silent figure of immutable justice—saying and missing nothing. The gentry of the press, including a large delegation from the distaff side, wandered around the world's premier skate ballerina, listening to her bird-like chirp and nibbling morsels from the smorgasbord which was set on two big-top tables.

Austen Lake

Sonja had come fresh from the hands of her personal masseuse, Miss Marion Gold, and her private barber, Miss Betty King. Daughter, dear and charming, looked just what she is—a pure financial nugget. There was a little cosmetic dusting above her eyelids, a little trimmer pluck-ing about her brows, a little pastel-pink on the contour of her cheeks. But her lips were nature's own carmine.

She smelt faintly of moist, woodsy odors, like moss in early April. Breakfast at Noon, Bed at 2 a. m.

SONJA SPOKE IN A CULTIVATED COLORATURA, blended with a natural twitter which ended in quick, rising inflections that were tipped with a trace of Nordic burr. Sometimes she patted her ringlets—feminine sign of secret boredom. Sometimes she made swift asides in her native tongue, so that Mumma wriggled inside her stays, wrinkled her nose and nodded assent. Possibly Sonja was saying, "O such repetitious bores, Mumma, will they never let a lady get to curl papers."

A white-coated waiter proffers a tray of colored curlicues on wafers [illegible] of artichoke imbedded in cheese-paste, minuscule hunks of [illegible] and other delicacies. Sonja resists. And Only 2 Years in Big Time!

Hugh Mulcahy Hits Stardom

By HERB FINNEGAN

While the trade winds are giving pneumonia to Elbie Fletcher, Ben Chapman, Pinky Higgins et al., one of the most sought after players in the National League sits in his cozy new home on Fairway Drive, West Newton, and calmly awaits the start of another major league season.

He is Hughie Mulcahy, former Allston boy, who made good with Jimmy Wilson's Phillies.

"Never Win" they called him in 1937, his first full season with the Phillies.

"Never Lose" they'll be calling him if he ever gets with a first division club. And that day may be here before the week is out, because the Giants, Reds and Dodgers are casting covetous eyes in his direction.

Hughie's brief career is worth reviewing. Starting as a shortstop at Brighton High, he nursed ambitions to become as famous a hurler as his Dad, Ol' "Blue" Mulcahy, who was blowing them down when Lucy Ryan and Johnny Popp were in their hey day at Barry's Corner. Ask Dad, he knows.

TOM WAS SMART

But Hughie was a tall gangling kid in his early teens and the late Tom Scanlon wasn't anxious to rush him. So Hughie didn't pitch until his senior year, but when he did start he showed the goods and three years took control of fielding and batting. One could add nasty [illegible] background coming [illegible] times with [illegible] was [illegible] outs at Allston [illegible] pitched.

A year with [illegible] Dean Academy [illegible] Hughie was [illegible] the ways. At least [illegible] Tom Yawkey [illegible] Hughie a [illegible] Inside Track was [illegible] is among [illegible] to wangle the deal was from [illegible] Phils. Atwood [illegible] Quincy of the New England League and after the usual July 4 explosion Hughie finished the season with Dan Sullivan at Saranac Lake.

Hughie went to Reading and [illegible] with Skinny Graham in 1934 and although he didn't stick, Eddie Collins thought so much of him that he got him a berth with Manchester in the Northeastern League.

The kid vindicated Eddie's judgment because he was taken south by Washington the following spring and sent to their Albany farm. On July 10 of that year he was picked up by the Phils and that Hughie says was a good break.

LAUDS JIMMY WILSON

GOOD BREAK? That sounded incredible.

"Yes," said Hughie seriously, "because in Philly I met the man who knows more about pitchers and pitching than any other pilot in baseball. I mean Jimmy Wilson.

"It really is surprising how long a fellow can be in baseball and still know nothing about it. But I found out I knew exactly zero when Jim started working with me. Actually I didn't know how to stand on the rubber. But you've got to learn with Jim or get out. So I learned.

"He had me keep a book on all opposing hitters, their strong points, weaknesses and all. And that helped.

"But what impressed me the most was that, on the first day of spring practice in 1936, he came to me and told me he had decided to change my delivery from side arm to three-quarters over arm.

MOST VALUABLE AWARD

"'You're not getting the benefit of your body with that side-arm pitch,' he told me. 'I've been thinking it over during the winter. You'll be all right now.' Imagine a fellow thinking baseball all winter long."

Jimmy sent Hugh to Hazleton to perfect his new delivery and so aptly did the kid apply himself that he won 25 while losing 14 and won a trophy two feet high awarded by Sporting News to the outstanding player in the league.

So up he came, this time to stay. His 1937 record wasn't so hot, as we have said, but in 1938 it was a different story. One reason was the shift from Baker Bowl to Shibe Park, but the main reason was experience.

Last season he missed two no-hitters by tissue paper margins. He pitched a two-hitter against the Bees, and the first of them came in the eighth inning. Later, he held the potent champing Cincinnati Reds hitless for seven innings when an excited Ladies' Day patron screamed "You've got a no-hitter." "She was wrong," he counted Hugh with a smile, "because Schnozzle Lombardi pickled one in the eighth."

Hughie's a big lad, six-three and weighing 193. He usually spends his winters playing golf, skating and going to hockey games. In this winter he's added tree chopping to his repertoire. West Newton is still rustic.

FIRST SINCE "BAE"

He's a swell kid, is Hugh, one who has still to learn how to smoke or drink despite his ascension to stardom.

And whether he realizes it or not, the fact that Connie Mack kid since Tom Rafferty to stick in the big time.

Let's see now, am I right? Walter Lonergan, Justin McLoughlin, Eddie Gallagher but they didn't stick, and I can't recall any others.

Swell kid, did I say? You ought to see the new Colonial home he just bought for his mother last week. And less than six years out of school.

Show me a pool shark or a jitterbug who can match that record.

Hughie keeps in shape wielding the axe about home. The recent hurricane made this possible.

MILK FOR BREAKFAST. So anxious is Hughie Mulcahy to become a big league standout that he even shuns coffee. Here he's taking a second glass of milk from mother.

Hugh Awards Medals To Allston Champs

Hughie Mulcahy will appear tonight at St. Anthony's school hall, Allston, to award medals to the St. Anthony's H. N. S. nine, Parks Department League champions in their class.

"I used to have a mouth full of words, but only bubbles would come out," said Hugh in relating his early post-prandial days, "but lately I have been able to eat the same night without suffering gastronomical gymnastics. I never do expect to rival Demosthenes, though," he added.

Hugh's Boston Record

Hughie Mulcahy pitched twice at National League Field last season, both times against Jim Turner. In the first game he defeated the Bees veteran, 6 to 2, but lost the second, 2-1, in 12 innings.

Brimsek's Run Ends

Good Thing for Rookie Goalie, Says Ross

By BILL GRIMES

You can tell the world that I'm not only glad but very much relieved that Frankie Brimsek was scored on last night," confessed Manager Art Ross this morning when queried on his reaction as to the breaking of the rookie goal tenders streak, which bettered Tiny Thompson's mark by 1 minute and 1 second.

"Of course when Frankie went through three games without being scored on" continued Ross, "it gave you fellows something to write about, but after he'd blanked the Rangers in New York, I felt that the sooner some club scored on him the better it would be for all concerned, excepting, of course, the scribes.

PLAYERS TIGHTEN UP

"Under the present code of rules, the goal minders are under a constant strain. There are many nights when games go along two and even three periods without any scoring. It doesn't require many of those games to wear down goalies. Frankie is just breaking into big time hockey. He has enough on his mind watching opponents without worrying about any shut out records.

"And, there's another angle which must be considered concerning shut out records. The other players become as jittery as the goal minders. They bear down so hard that they frequently tighten up and when the break finally comes there's liable to be some comment as to who was responsible for the goal.

"Yes, sir, I'm glad that is over. And, let me add, just watch young Brimsek and the rest of the Bruins step now, not that they haven't been going very well all season but they'll all be more and more when they tackle Les Canadiens tomorrow night in Montreal.

"After our 3 to 2 victory last night, I sat up a few hours doping Cecil Hart's club. When the Frenchmen beat us in Montreal a couple of weeks ago, I thought that we were bad. I guess I was pulling so hard for Brimsek to get off to a winning start that I underestimated the strength of Canadiens.

"Hart has a much stronger and better balanced club than I thought he had. They were off color during the first period but they were certainly travelling at a merry pace during the last 40 minutes. And, as I see it, they won't be holding up the league much longer."

FRANK BRIMSEK

BRIMSEK RECORD

Going into last night's game, Frankie Brimsek hadn't been scored on for 192 minutes and 46 seconds. He went through the first period O. K., but with 46 seconds to go in the second stanza, Dutch Cain beat him when his outer defense men were caught down the ice.

Brimsek broke the record of 224 minutes and 52 seconds, which Tiny Thompson established in March 1936, by seven minutes and four seconds.

Nation's No. 1 Idol Here

Dempsey Aids Basket Fund

Tiger Jack Dempsey, recent winner of the Neil award for doing the most for boxing in 1938 and still the athletic idol No. 1 of the Nation, returns to Boston tonight to referee a bruising battle royal which features Sam Price's wrestling program at the Boston Arena.

Dempsey a month or so ago decided to give up all boxing and officiating roles and devote all his time to his restaurant business.

But tonight's show at the Boston Arena for the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund will find Dempsey when approached didn't hesitate a moment in agreeing to lend his support.

MR. BOSTON

Pastor vs. Shucco, Knox and McCoy ¦ Pro Boxing in Comeback

By JACK CONWAY

PROFESSIONAL boxing will come back to Boston in a big way at the Garden on December 21 when the Goodwin A. C. offers a brilliant attraction at its annual show for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser. Take a look at the feature attractions.

Mr. Boston

Bob Pastor, New York, against Tony Shucco, North End.

Al McCoy, New England heavyweight champion, opposing Buddy Knox of Chicago.

Either one of these bouts would be sufficient to attract a large crowd to the Garden. Together they furnish Boston and New England boxing fans with the best ring attraction of the season.

Pastor first gained national standing as a heavyweight when he weathered ten blistering rounds with Joe Louis.

Pastor later came to Boston, and proved his amazing ability as a boxer and puncher by outscoring Al McCoy.

Jimmy Johnston manages Pastor, and if you believe the "Boy Bandit" the New York heavyweight will be the one to eventually win the championship from Louis.

Shucco does not believe Pastor will be able to defeat him at the Basket Fund show. Tony, wise in the affairs of the ring, a better than an average boxer and a sharp hitter, considers the Pastor match a stepping stone to more important victories.

Shucco recently returned to the United States following a successful ring campaign in England, Ireland and in Germany. Tony is certain to receive a warm welcome from his friends here, and they will be rooting for him to score a decisive victory over the highly touted Pastor.

Knox Has Already Beaten McCoy

BUDDY KNOX conquered Al McCoy in a thrilling ten-round tussle in Chicago last summer. Knox, an Irish-American youngster, has blazed his way to fame behind a smashing right-hand punch. Buddy isn't as good a boxer as the more experienced McCoy, but he is a better socker. It is Knox's hope to make his Boston ring debut by scoring with a knockout.

If Knox can gain a sensational victory here, he will become a great Boston card. This city has always accorded friendly welcomes to Irish-American boxers. Many of the former followers of Jock Malone, Mickey Walker, Mike O'Dowd, George Ward, and other Irish-American ring men who did well here, will be on hand to cheer for a Knox win.

McCoy realizes he will be fighting with his back against the well known wall when he tangles up with Knox. Al must leave the ring a victor if he is to remain out front with the leading heavyweight contenders.

Since losing to Knox in Chicago, McCoy has kept active, and has been displaying improved boxing and punching ability. In his last start, Al won from Bob Olin, former world's light-heavyweight champion, in Montreal.

McCoy is only 25 years old, and his ring future is still very much ahead of him if he can dispose of Knox.

Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club plans to match the winner of the Pastor-Shucco tussle to collide with the victor of the McCoy-Knox skirmish in January at the Garden.

The advance sale for the coming Garden tussle has already passed the $1800 mark which is proof that the public will always support the right kind of an attraction.

Tony Ferry to Stay in Amateurs

TONY FERRY, Fall River heavyweight who won from John Shkor of Baltimore in the final in the Eastern All-America championships, will remain in the ranks of the amateurs until after the 1940 Olympic games.

Ferry is only 19 years of age. The youngster has a brilliant ring future, and he wishes to gain more experience before he becomes a professional.

The Fall River heavyweight will compete in the Hearst All-America grand national finals in Detroit on January 25, and he will have an excellent chance to be crowned title holder. For a young boxer Ferry has exceptional ring polish, while he is courageous, a good general and a hard hitter.

It is Ferry's plan to compete in the New England boxing championships in the spring in the expectation he will be selected to represent this section of the country in the A. A. U. national championships in San Francisco in April.

In 1940 Ferry will try for a place on the American Olympic team. If the Fall River heavyweight should become Olympic champion, he would enter professional boxer with a colorful background.

I thought Johnny Shkor of Baltimore, who lost to Ferry, also has a promising career ahead of him. Shkor has engaged only in a few amateur bouts, but nevertheless showed real fighting form under fire. The Baltimore youngster is a terrific puncher. With age, he will add weight, and should make a strong bid for the national title next April in San Francisco.

Cinderella Sonja Retains Simplicity

Sonja's in town, so you will see the Garden packed to the rafters for the next five days. Sonja may or may not be the peer of Evelyn Chandler in skating, but she has nobody in her class as a gate attraction.

Opens 5-Night Show at Garden

By WALTER KILEY

Fame and wealth and world plaudits have done little to change Sonja Henie, Norway's "Cinderella Girl" who dances and pirouettes and weaves her gorgeous patterns over the creamy ice surface of Boston Garden in her lovely "Hollywood Revue" which opens a five night stay this evening.

Dimpled Sonja is still as dimpled and still as charming as she was a decade ago when she first came to Boston, an amateur with world and Olympic figure skating championships as her background.

Her smile turns on easily, seemingly genuine as ever. Her raiment may be finer and more costly, her dark-skinned minks more costly and richer, her skating settings more beautiful and fitting.

But to one who has known her through the years which skyrocketed her to untold fortune, she remains genuine, unspoiled, a true artist on and off the ice, with a glamorous career still in its infancy.

She's the born trouper, answering a barrage of interviewers' questions with a deftness born of long experience, frank in her replies and sparing herself little.

She insists she's not in love, has no particular male fancy, would rather skate all day than submit to Hollywood's movie kisses, is fabulously wealthy, has a future secure against want, and hopes eventually to settle down to becoming a young woman leading a natural, untrammelled existence.

In tonight's show and every day through Sunday, Miss Henie dominates the featured numbers and scenes in the Heywood Revue.

Yanks Proved Best in Clutch

For the second consecutive year, the New York Yankees proved to be the toughest team in the American League when it came to snatching victories in extra innings, the ninth inning or their own eighth inning when at home.

The world champions were on top in eighteen of twenty-four such contests.

Boston was close behind with a score of eighteen and nine.

Then came Washington which took part in thirty-nine last-ditch battles and won twenty-two of them, six of the victories and three of the defeats being staged with Cleveland.

New York, Boston and Washington were the only clubs to break better than even in those games won or lost at the finish, although Cleveland and Detroit were only one game on the wrong side of the ledger.

The Chicago White Sox who ranked second best in this respect a year ago were last this season, losing twenty games in the final round, which shows that losing Clint Brown, their star relief pitcher, hurt more than a little.

Rutgers' Grid Coach Meets N. E. Alumni

John F. Tinsley, president of the Rutgers Club of New England, has scheduled an interesting meeting at the University Club Friday night for the Rutgers alumni in this vicinity. Harvey Harman, the Rutgers football coach, will be the speaker and will show movies of the Princeton-Rutgers game.

Of Night Baseball

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (AP)—Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Indians, said "You are safe in saying that we will be given official approval today" for night baseball in the American League.

Attorney Joseph C. Hostetler, secretary of the Cleveland club, drew up a set of regulations to govern night games at the league's instruction.

Bradley said he believed that six of the eight clubs would vote in favor of the innovation. The Indians and the Philadelphia Athletics probably will be the only clubs to start night games this year, he said.

Miller, who started at left end in every major contest in the last two seasons, succeeds Bob MacLeod. Miller captained the frosh team, is a letterman in skiing and president of his class.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (AP)—Maxie Berger of Montreal and New York scored an impressive eight-round victory over rugged Frankie Cavanna, another New Yorker, at the Broadway Arena.

Banner Show At Somerville

More than 25 action-packed bouts are expected in the amateur boxing tourney tonight at the Somerville High School gym, being sponsored by the City of Somerville for its Xmas Basket Fund, for director Fred Russo has received over 40 entries for the show.

Russo, who put over a series of simon-pure swingfests for the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., last summer has lined up the leading pure leather tossers in New England. Boxing will be in the 126, 135, 147, 160 and heavyweight classes.

The entire proceeds of the show will be handed over to the City of Somerville Fund to help the needy. And the amateur boxers have been flocking to the firing line to help out this cause and spread a little Christmas cheer.

Johnny Hayes, Roxbury, All-America 175-pound champion, heads the crop of entries. He'll fight in the heavyweights tonight and foremost opposition will be furnished by Henry Burak, Hyde Park, and Chuck Prendible, Charlestown.

In the 160-pound division are Lew Smith, East Boston, state champion a year ago, and Ray Lampray, Worcester.

Record Entry For Gotham Show

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (AP)—A record number of entries from states all along the Atlantic seaboard is expected for the 1939 Eastern Amateur Figure Skating Championships, to be held Jan. 6-7 at the Iceland Skating Rink under the auspices of the Skating Club of New York.

There will be competition in pairs, waltz and ten-step as well as senior, junior and novice singles for men and women.

McCoy Showing Old Pepper In Workouts

A challenger for Joe Louis and the world heavyweight boxing championship may rise out of the Goodwin A. C. Christmas Basket Fund boxing show at the Boston Garden a week from tonight with Tony Shucco, Boston, meeting Bob Pastor, New York, and Al McCoy, Boston, fighting Buddy Knox, Chicago, in the two 10-round main bouts.

Shucco and McCoy will be on the short ends of the betting but both are likely to spring upsets and push Knox and Pastor out of the running. Promoter Mike Jacobs' scouts will be on hand to see these heavyweight warriors in action in what amounts to the most attractive boxing show offered in this section in years.

PASTOR HITS HARD

The critics point out that Pastor hits too hard for Shucco and that Knox, Chicago "white hope," improving by leaps and bounds, should repeat his previous triumph over McCoy in Chicago last summer when he not only took the decision but dropped McCoy during the clash.

McCoy was badly in need of work when he stepped in with Knox but has been fighting frequently since and reports from New York are that McCoy, down to 180 pounds, is finally looking like the fighter he's been expected to be all along.

Shucco, in daily drills at Kelley and Hayes gym, seems to be hitting harder and is still dazzling the onlookers with his skill. Pastor may be a terrific right-hand hitter but he's not going to hit Shucco very much, according to those who profess to know about such things.

EXPECT BIG CROWD

The Christmas Basket Fund show is arousing heavy interest in professional boxing and the biggest crowd in years may be on hand when the swinging starts.

Other bouts on the card will be Henry Chmielewski vs. Young Jack Dempsey, Fred Cabral vs. Oscar Suggs, Jerry Zullo vs. Sam Tenorio and George Salamond vs. Martin Riley.

The remainder of the game and a contest scheduled between the two schools' first teams were cancelled.

Frisch Tells Secret

Played '21 Series With Cataracts

By BILL CORUM

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (INS)—Frankie Frisch, the old gentleman from New Rochelle, lounged in one of those soft-sitting lobby chairs in the Waldorf yesterday afternoon and told a tale that would have been the biggest sports story of the year—in 1921.

It started when Artie Devlin, of the old, old Giants of John McGraw's heyday, wandered over in a pair of tortoise shell-rimmed spectacles.

"What are you trying to do, look dignified, Art?" asked Frisch. "I thought you used to tell me that you had the greatest pair of eyes in baseball."

DEVLIN AMAZED

Devlin was Frisch's coach at Fordham before Frankie came winging down "the hill" to become a big league star overnight.

"And so I did, so I did," replied the portly Arthur, "have eyes as nearly perfect as a man could have. But now I've got a cataract over my left eye, so that I can't see out of it at all, and the right one is beginning to weaken under the extra strain."

"Just one cataract?" asked Frisch.

"One is one too many, isn't it?" countered Devlin.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Frankie, easily, "I had two once, one in each eye, and I didn't let 'em stop me."

"Don't kid an old man with troubles Frank," said Devlin. "I've known you ever since you were knee high to a grasshopper, and you never had any trouble with your eyes in your life."

THOUGHT END NEAR

"That's what you think," replied Frisch. "But late in the season of 1921, I developed a cataract on either eye, and when the World Series was over, I wasn't sure but what it was the only one in which I'd ever play. Gee, was I scared!

"The cataracts, and worrying over 'em, had me so I thought I was seeing the ball through a haze. I probably was, although, looking back on it now, I guess it wasn't as bad as I imagined. Still, a cataract is a cataract and if I hadn't been young, I might have pulled up before the season was over.

KEPT IT SECRET

"As it was, I played the string out, though the doctor was ready to operate as soon as the last game was over. I wouldn't tell a soul because I figured if the story got out my big league career might be ended. I also figured those pitchers would feel that they had two strikes on me the minute I came up to the plate.

"So the operation was performed in deepest secrecy. After the cataracts were removed, they had to take one stitch in each eye. These stitches were rough and ticklish, and when I roll my eyeballs up I can almost feel 'em yet. Because all the time the stitches were in there, I kept doing that, and thinking that was the end of me as a ball player. Then they removed the stitches and put some sort of cream in my eyes, and in a few days I knew everything was going to be all right.

LEGS QUIT FIRST

"Say, when I went South the next spring was I happy! I could see all those fat years ahead of me, and I knew nothing was going to keep me from being what I always wanted to be, a regular with the Giants.

"The eyes fooled all right after that. It was the legs that finally gave out."

"Well, I'll be darned," said Devlin, "I never heard that story before."

"You, nor nobody else for a lot of years," said Frankie. "I figured it might reduce my value as a player if anybody found it out."

Abe Denner Wins New York Bout

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 (AP)—Al Reid, rugged New York featherweight, came up off the floor to win a close decision over Paul Lea of Indianapolis in an eight-round bout before 4000 fans at the Coliseum.

Abe Denner, 124¼, of Boston handed Armanda Sicilia, 129¾, of Chicago, a severe trouncing in the eight round semifinal. Denner floored Sicilia three times in as many rounds and won seven of the eight heats.

Steel Pay Lift Aiding Stores

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Economic Commentator

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 13—Pittsburgh retail sales are now reflecting the pickup in industrial payrolls in the great iron and steel area since the low point attained in midyear.

Until the Christmas motive began to induce buying, retailing suffered somewhat from the unseasonably mild weather.

Edgar Kaufman, president of this city's largest department store, which bears his name, told me it was his impression that the primary markets were fairly clean of merchandise, and he seemed hopeful concerning the business outlook. He thought that sales in all the local stores would this month equal the record for December, 1937.

HIT FOREIGN GOODS

The merchant said that consumer feeling against certain foreign merchandise was running high. He said that his store was not handling German merchandise, and he had also received consumer protests against Japanese goods. He said that unless directed along constructive channels some of these emotional movements could prove destructive.

The store is seeking to develop consumer interest in products of Finland, the one country which has been consistently honoring its debt to the United States Treasury, he declared.

Arthur Braun, president of the Farmers' Deposit National Bank here, told me about the continuing small demand for commercial loans and the effect of this on the effort to sustain bank earnings. He expressed the view that banks had no alternative except to build up their investment account, and indicated that their convertibility into cash at the federal reserve added to the attractiveness of United States obligations.

AIDS YOUNGSTERS

From the human standpoint, Braun stressed the importance of not letting youngsters just out of school feel that the door of opportunity is barred.

He said that the bank had taken on a limited number of young college men during the vacation season, and had obtained encouraging results. He indicated, however, that the turnover in personnel at the bank was negligible.

As I move around the country, I find numerous older men concerned over the seeming decline in the spirit of self reliance. As an aftermath of depression, there seems a disposition to stress security, rather than venturesomeness.

As for myself, I believe that when the national economy is better balanced, there will be a renaissance of self reliance and ambition, with a disposition to glorify progress rather than mere security.

Curtailment Of Cotton Output Seen

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Financial Editor

Recent weakness in quotations for principal cotton cloth lines has brought some talk of curtailment. It is likely, but impartial observers do not find the prospect frightening.

They feel that some allowance must be made for seasonal influences. After all the holiday trade has long since been taken care of and buyers now are operating on "prospects" for 1939.

In this connection, incidentally, the reports of low stocks in the hands of merchants is very important. Reluctant forward buyers may find themselves in the position of being stampeded a few weeks hence, particularly as mills are now considering curtailment.

STOCKS BULKY

Stocks in the hands of the primary producers are admittedly a bit bulky but experience this year has proven recovery buying trims them down rather rapidly.

In the event cotton mill operations are reduced moderate ordering for stocking purposes would in itself operate to reduce mill inventories rather rapidly and, as we pointed out, if at any better than that the statistical position could improve fast.

The stock market is making a determined effort to fight its way clear of the narrow trading range in which it has been enmeshed for weeks. So far, so good. We would like to say the job has been accomplished in full but to do so right now would simply be a matter of making a guess.

DIFFICULT TO INTERPRET

The thing we would like very much to see is a closing for the industrial average above 150. Intra-session behavior that might be satisfactory would be a decidedly up-opening on big volume with a steady pushing ahead to a level undeniably better than the hoped for close.

Such a type of market action is most difficult of interpretation and while we may try it, making the necessary changes in this column during the publishing day, we do not relish the prospect.

HOURLY

PLAY-BY-PLAY IN THE STOCK MARKET

Stock prices stumbled over selling orders for a moment or two today but soon regained stride and carried on for gains of fractions to more than 2 points.

10-11—Stock prices continued to beat their way along the rallying trail at the opening. Gains of fractions to a point were generously distributed among the leaders of all pivotal groups. Steels, motors, aviations and rails were in the forefront of the upturn, closely followed by coppers mail orders and construction specialties. Trading picked up smartly, but overnight advances were not greatly improved on. Around best levels sellers put up more resistance than they had of late and prices backed away from offerings in many directions. Volume 430,000 shares.

11-12—Trading contracted as the rally tapered off and no severe losses were incurred in the first serious brush between sellers and buyers in several weeks. The hesitation was short-lived, however, and buyers soon had things well in hand once again. The list was ahead fractions to better than a point with such favorites as Douglas, Sperry and United Aircraft crashing through selling orders to establish new high marks for the year or longer. The chemicals spurted in more lively fashion than they have of late. Union Carbide and duPont provided the necessary leadership. Transfers, 810,000 shares.

* * *

12-1—Construction shares found a prominent place on the tape as traders and investors digested the inferences of the latest increase in federal housing funds. Other specialties to push forward were American Can, Cerro de Pasco and the rubbers. Reo Motors was having a rocky time of it as stock was freely offered on news a group of stockholders sought a receiver. The pace was fast, and as one pivotal rested another was brought forward to fill any breech in the advancing ranks. Transfers, 1,180,000 shares.

* * *

1-2—The market continued to pound through to fresh recovery highs under the finest of leadership. The chemicals literally shot higher, steels splurged, motor equipments snapped out of the doldrums, coppers did better and rails turned in a satisfactory performance. Prices were up from fractions to more than 2 points. It was a typically bullish demonstration of how fast offerings could be swept away once buying imaginations were fired. Volume lifted smartly to 1,430,000 shares, well above anything in recent sessions.

Patent Probers May Ask Reform Of Capitalism

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)
Special to Boston Evening American.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—The monopoly inquiry passed lightly over the use of patents in the motor industry, where the various companies are free to get licenses to use what features they desire.

Now the committee comes to the glass-container business, where patents are sewed up more tightly. This is what they are after. Probably more time will be devoted to the alleged "evils" of the capitalistic system than to its good features.

This procedure is natural enough, and will do no harm if the purpose be not to overthrow capitalism, but to reform it. As long as we merely try to make a good thing better, it is fair enough to focus attention on the "evils."

The idea underlying the patent system is one of individualism and private enterprise. In order to motivate individual activity in the field of invention and discovery, the capitalistic system promises the inventor that he will be protected in his invention, and be rewarded by having the right to be the sole user of it if he so desires.

Our anti-trust law and the judicial decisions thereunder, considerably restrict patentees. For example, if they sell a patented device outright, they cannot fix the prices and uses which the purchaser may adopt after it becomes his property.

Patents must not be used to give a combination of different companies the power to restrain trade, or to estiblish monopoly. The patentee may not suppress his patent for the purpose of restraining trade.

The courts always consider the "intent" of the patentholder in such cases.

It may well be, therefore, that we may find it desirable to place some further restrictions upon the use of patents, either by extending the limits placed by the anti-trust laws, or by modifying the patent law itself. My thought leans to the former method.

It's a fact—no sooner do the bright-and-shiny new models come into the market than a crop of excellent used-car values start coming in, too. People who can't resist buying the very newest models are the people who often bring in last year's (or the year before's) models in almost good-as-new condition. If you're looking for the tops in used-car value, their good luck is yours. This is the time—and the Record-American and Sunday Advertiser Automobile for Sale Columns is the place to find these values.
